PHEAA conducts FAFSA Completion Events each October through April. These sessions are free to the public. An event schedule, plus additional FAFSA information is available at PHEAA.org/FAFSA.

The U.S. Department of Education (USDE) has numerous websites that offer information on federal guidelines for student financial aid programs and they also manage the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) application website where you can complete your FAFSA online.

EducationPlanner.org, a career and college-planning website, offers FAFSA information.

MySmartBorrowing.org, PHEAA's free, interactive tool, helps you learn to make SMART decisions about career choice and paying for higher education.

Your school counselor and/or the financial aid administrator at your school of choice are available to answer your FAFSA questions.

Your school library and the public library are great resources for researching information on schools and financial aid.

DON'T BE FOOLED! Some private companies charge a fee to help you complete the FAFSA, but why shell out cash when there's free help available?!
